O=Technically yes/kind of Interesting themes:

1. Japanese and American textbooks discuss completely different treaties. Japanese ones discuss the nuclear disarmament movement and international actions taken. American sources only focus on US-soviet relations for the most part.
2. American textbooks are the only ones that mention the Manhattan project and attempt to justify the bomb/the land invasion option.
3. The hibakusha death count was all over the place but the american side was much much lower than the Japanese side.
4. A lot of the American textbooks don't mention the soviets invading japan and why that matters (broke the soviet-japan neutrality treaty)
